

Project Objectives ●

Interpersonal Communication Skills (ICS) training in a workplace context for pre-release offenders while activating and developing common civic values as a basis to support social reintegration.

Blended teaching methodologies such as face-to-face and experiential training modalities alongside a Virtual Reality (VR) platform used as a training ground for skills' practice.

Project Aim ●

Increasing pre-release detainees' workplace communication skills, provide a valuing system to support prosocial reintegration and increase social self-efficacy.

Impact ●

The project intends to benefit organisations that aspire for greater societal impact in the field of detainee reentry.

It is expected that policy holders, staff of penitentiary systems, employers and organisations tasked with the support of detainee reentry will exchange opinions during informational events and develop fruitful conversations and insights about the role of supporting ICS during incarceration and re-entry. These discussion forums will reveal new needs, and ways to further exploit project outcomes for related groups of learners.

The project aims to be impactful to other professional groups involved in detainee reentry such as psychology, criminology and social work students and professionals.

Target Groups ●

Detainees between 20-60 years old (male, female, other), independent of ethnic background, educational level, language and religion in four (4) European participating countries, nearing the end of their sentence.

Prison staff (correctional officers, guards, management staff etc.) who have a role in the training of detainees.

General public population included policy makers, Ministry of Justice, NGOs and employers at local, national and international level.
